Chapter 12: A Gift for the Mortal Realm

The world of Earth, now at peace after the turbulent battles fought against the Apostles of Itarim and the forces of destruction, began to thrive once more. The Divine Triad had set their gaze upon it, knowing that this realm, though powerful and resilient, still had a long way to go before it could truly stand on its own in the greater multiverse. To ensure its future and the safety of those they loved, the second clones of Absolute Humanoid Being and Absolute Dragonic Being were sent to Earth. These clones, while bearing only 5% of the power of their originals, were still formidable in their own right.

Their task was both sacred and profound: to ensure that those closest to the Divine Triad, and especially their families, would be granted the eternal gift of life—the same life force that sustained them across countless eons. It was also an opportunity to raise the mortal realm to new heights, ensuring its champions would be imbued with the strength needed to protect it from any future threat.

The Second Clones Arrive

As the second clones set foot upon Earth, they were greeted by the people they had once known in their true forms—their families, their allies, and the people who had shaped their journey. Though they did not reveal their true nature, the clones knew that their task would require delicate handling, as the world had no knowledge of the Divine Triad and their vast power.

The second clone of Sung Jin-Woo, now appearing as the same humanoid figure, stood before his family: Park Kyung-Hye, his devoted mother; Sung Il-Hwan, his strong and guiding father; and his younger sister, Sung Jin-Ah. Though his face was familiar to them, there was something undeniably different about him—his presence felt otherworldly. Despite the change, they welcomed him with open arms, sensing no ill intent.

The second clone of Sung Su-Ho also appeared in the form of his earthly counterpart, though his draconic aura remained hidden beneath the guise of humanity. He was welcomed by his wife, Lee Hye-Seo, and their two children, Sung Ye-Jun and Sung Ye-Rin. Their eyes sparkled with admiration and warmth as they embraced him. They did not know what had changed in him, but they trusted him as they always had.

The Gift of Eternal Life

The second clones did not waste time in revealing their purpose. They carried with them a vial of the Water of Eternal Life—a substance drawn from the very wellsprings of creation itself. This water had the power to grant eternal life to those who drank it, ensuring they would live for eons without the threat of age or illness. It was a gift of immortality, but not in the traditional sense; it would keep their spirits bound to the mortal realm, ensuring their protection and well-being.

One by one, the families and close allies of the Divine Triad were approached. They were given the Water of Eternal Life and instructed to drink. Among them were Woo Jin-Cheol, the chairman of the Hunter's Association, who had long been a pillar of strength for the world’s hunters, and Yoo Jin-Ho, the beloved husband of Sung Jin-Ah. The clone of Sung Jin-Woo carefully administered the water to his family, each member receiving their share.

With a single drop of the water, they all felt a surge of energy—a sense of profound awakening. For the first time in their lives, they could feel the boundaries of their bodies expand. Their physical forms became invulnerable to decay, and the weight of age was lifted from their shoulders. But it did not stop there; the water also bestowed upon them the power of the Awakened, granting even the unawakened the ability to tap into their latent potential.

The Power to Awaken

For the first time, those who had lived as ordinary mortals could now awaken to their hidden potential. The unawakened were granted the gift of awakening, transforming them into hunters with the same powers as those born with the ability to awaken. Even those who had already been awakened gained strength beyond their wildest dreams.

As the second clone of Sung Jin-Woo watched over his family and friends, he witnessed the transformation of each individual. Park Kyung-Hye felt the surge of power within her, her instincts sharpening as she suddenly realized her potential. Sung Il-Hwan experienced the same—his years of experience as a hunter were now enhanced, making him a force to be reckoned with. The clone smiled as he saw his little sister, Sung Jin-Ah, not just a supportive sibling anymore, but now an S-Rank Hunter.

The second clone of Sung Su-Ho performed the same ritual for Lee Hye-Seo, Sung Ye-Jun, and Sung Ye-Rin, ensuring that the bloodline of the Dragon Monarch would remain strong and protected for all eternity. As Sung Ye-Jun and Sung Ye-Rin drank the water, they felt the strength of the Dragon Monarch course through their veins, their potential blooming to its fullest.

The Awakened Become Unstoppable

Now, with their power greatly amplified, their families and colleagues had become S-Rank warriors in their own right, regardless of their previous rank. No longer would they be vulnerable to the forces of destruction or the rising threat of the Itarim and their apostles. Each of them was now a force that could defend not only their realm but also the Divine Triad's multiversal empire.

The second clones were satisfied with the outcome of their task. They had ensured that those they cared for were granted the gift of eternal life, as well as the power to defend themselves and their world. With the Earth now firmly under the protection of the Divine Triad and their immortal, awakened families, the multiverse would be able to live in peace for generations to come.
